By Don Pucik
Associational Mission Strategist

Almost two decades ago, I posed a question to a profoundly divided assembly of church leaders: "What is the problem?" The pastor, on the verge of losing his job, struggled to define the problem. The staff wrestled with the question for two days in a retreat, and the deacons argued about it for months. There was a lack of agreement among everyone regarding the problem, with each person having their own interpretation. This church was in conflict – they were "stuck" and needed help.

Conflict in the church is nothing new. In the first century, church members were already experiencing conflict. James asked an early group of believers, "What is the source of quarrels and conflicts among you?" (James 4:1).

Conflict arises when two or more individuals hold opposing and competitive positions. In a church, these differences can lead to frustration as families and friends advocate for their preferences and points of view. The challenge to work together becomes even greater in a consumer-driven culture, where the focus is on meeting people's desires. If the church is built on catering to people's wants, it risks becoming a congregation of selfish individuals who are unable to collaborate with one another.

Don Pucik

Individuals react to conflict in various ways. Some members choose to leave and find a more agreeable environment. Among the remaining members, there are those who strive for a peaceful resolution, while others become too agitated to back down, leading to an escalation of the conflict to new heights. It becomes challenging to envision a way towards the kind of unity and peace that the church should set as an example in their relationships.

The root cause of conflict turning destructive among church members is not their differences but rather their behavior. Members who are spiritually mature can control their emotions and work towards productive outcomes to resolve the conflict. They can treat conflicts as opportunities to show compassion and demonstrate Christlike patience.

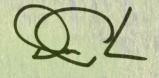

Is your church in conflict?

Set your heart to be a part of the solution and not the problem. In Ephesians 4:1, Paul writes, "Make every effort to keep the unity of the Spirit through the bond of peace." When someone becomes a member of a church, they are united with others in a very real and organic way through their shared faith in Christ. As a result, every member's relationship with the Lord should guide how they interact with other members of the church. When conflicts arise, both individuals and the community should work together to prioritize maintaining spiritual ties over personal preferences or concerns.

Remember that God is at work in the midst of every church conflict. In Romans 8:28, Paul writes, "And we know that God causes all things to work together for good." In a similar confession found in Genesis 50:20, Joseph explains to the brothers who once tried to kill him, "you meant evil against me, but God meant it for good." God has a plan to extract good from everything that happens to His people, even a damaging and hurtful church conflict. Cry out to Him for His intervention and rescue.

Seek out a third party willing to help your church walk through a peacemaking process. Someone from the "outside" can help guide the church through this difficult season. Unfortunately, the call for help too often comes when the escalation of conflict has become unmanageable. Don't wait. Your association and state convention have resources to help.

He is faithful!

SLU BCM Update

This semester has been one for the history books... We've learned of 3 students that have come to faith in Jesus through BCM and have seen others embrace a more proactive role in the spread of the gospel on campus.

Two highlights have been our weekly outreach table and our Go Groups.

Just yesterday at outreach we were engaging students with the Gospel when a non-binary student approached the table. One of our female students had an opportunity to engage her with the gospel and the love of Jesus. She explained God's design and that sin is failure to live in that design. Our BCM student got her contact information and has already set up a gospel appointment with the non-binary student.

The really amazing thing is that this student that now will be presenting the gospel and building a relationship with this girl, was not a Christian herself until last semester when we saw God reveal Himself to her and she surrendered her life to Jesus. This is the fruit of BCM ministry! We are thankful for your support.

The other highlight is our Go-Groups. These are pairs of students that go out on campus at different times during the week to engage students with the Gospel. They receive training as to how to connect with others outside the Christian subculture and clearly present the gospel. This has yielded so much opportunity for sowing the seed of the Gospel on campus and is prepping students to engage a post-Christian culture when they join the workforce.

This will be of a huge benefit to our local churches as more students are trained and equipped for the work of ministry. As we are ending another school year and starting the preparation for the coming year, I would request that churches in our association send us contact information of students that you have coming to SLU in the summer or the fall. We would love to train them, equip them, and send them into the lost and dying world so that by the time they graduate they are a fully equipped missionaries that will reach their workplace and neighborhood... and that they will engage them in the body of Christ, the church!

Please be in continued prayer for our ministry on campus. If you would like to send contact info or get involved, please email joeluna.bcm@aol.com or contact my cell 985-351-3943.
